POLICE DEPARTMENT

National Public Safety Telecommunicators Week is April 12-18, 2015. This is an annual event to recognize those people who are the first contact for citizens in need of public safety assistance. The Seaside Police Department Telecommunicators are tasked with 911 Dispatch duties as well as being trained as Emergency Medical Telecommunicators.

The Telecommunicators also take the calls for the department's non-emergency line and take care of the public that comes into the lobby. The Telecommunicator is an important member of the Public Safety team, as they are literally the first responder during a public safety response.

The Seaside Police Department Telecommunicators include Communications Manager Lynn Smith (35 years' service), Andi Toombs (10 years' service), Mitch Brown (9 years' service), Heidi Schneider (7 years' service), Diana Pappas (1 year service), Joelle Burk (9 months service), and Justin Bennett (2 months service).

Corporal Mike Demagalski has been assigned to the detective unit, filling the open detective position that Gary Welborn vacated when he was recently promoted to patrol sergeant. Sergeant Welborn started as the swing shift supervisor this week and Detective Demagalski will begin his duties in the detective unit next week. Congratulations to Sergeant Welborn for his recent promotion and to Detective Demagalski on his new assignment.

CONVENTION CENTER

The convention center was host to the Kiwanis Pancake Feed April 7, 2015 and the North Coast Round-Up April 9-12, 2015.

LIBRARY

Learn about "Pacific Northwest Indian Wars", with author and historian Gloria Linkey, on Saturday, April 11, 2015 at 1:00 p.m. Between 1848 and 1873 there were eight Native American wars in the Pacific Northwest and some of them were the most costly ever fought in our country. The Modoc war alone had a horrendous number of causalities and historians put it on a par with the Battle of the Little Bighorn. Historian Gloria Linkey will delve into these conflicts and shed some much needed light on the history of our region.

On April 15, at 6:00 p.m. you can listen to the Land as the Seaside Library and the North Coast Land Conservancy present "Protecting Oregon's Crown Jewels" with cultural anthropologist, Douglas Deur. On the eve of the Great Depression, Oregon's founding state parks supervisor managed to preserve some of the most spectacular sites on the Oregon Coast for public benefit. Douglas Deur will recount the amazing foresight our state had in protecting and conserving some of the North Coast's crown jewels.

Click your heels together and say, "There's no place like home", there's no place like home." If nothing happens then come to Preschool Story Time on Wednesday, April 15, at 10:00 a.m. because we be bringing down da house with H is for Home.
